DISCUSS RELIEF
FOR AMUNDSEN'S
POLE EXPEDITIONU. S. Government May Send Expedition to Rescue Him

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
At 2:30 p. m., New York daylight saving time, no word had been received from the Amundsen-Ellsworth flying expedition to the North Pole. The explorers hopped off in two flying boats from Spitzbergen Thursday afternoon.

President Coolidge is considering the possibility of sending an American relief expedition but it is not certain such steps are yet justified.

Some Arctic experts in London began today to express anxiety but generally speaking a note of optimism regarding the fate of the party was maintained. H. T. Perin, secretary of the Royal Aero Club of Great Britain, voiced confidence the party will come through safely.

Weather reports from the far north were less favorable today. At San Diego, Calif., Hans Nansen, nephew of the Arctic explorer, Fritz of Nansen, was raising funds to finance a relief flight to be conducted by Haakon H. Hammer, who led an expedition to relieve Amundsen in 1923.

Speculation continued of the possibility of Amundsen having continued his flight over the Pole and having already landed in Alaska. There were no facts to substantiate these theories.

Washington, May 26—(AP)—Government relief for the Amundsen expedition to the North Pole is favored by President Coolidge, but he is not certain that the situation has reached the point where such aid would be justified.

EXPLORERS NOT WORRIED

New York, May 26—(AP)—While tentative plans for relief expeditions are discussed, experienced Arctic explorers are still confident in the ability of Captain Roald Amundsen and his five companions to return safely from their airplane flight to the North Pole.

Amundsen, his American financial backer Lincoln Ellsworth, two pilots and two mechanics left Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, last Thursday at 5:15 p. m., or 11:15 a. m., eastern standard time. Unequipped with wireless apparatus, there is no possibility of their communicating with the civilized world.

"Nobody in Norway is anxious regarding the fate of Amundsen," Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, famous Arctic traveler, is quoted by a Copenhagen newspaper as declaring. "He is capable of handling himself under difficulties of any kind. There is no reason to feel nervous about him."

ICELANDER PLANS HELP
London, May 26—(AP)—Gretir Al-garsson, the young icelander, who planned to race Captain Amundsen's expedition to the North Pole, using a "blimp" or non-rigid airship, is quoted as saying that the Polar expedition had been changed by Amundsen's continued absence.

It was not a question of who was to be the first to reach the Pole by air, but who would be the first to reach Amundsen. The competitors in this race, he said, would be the American explorer, Commander Donald MacMillan and himself.

He confirmed a report that his supply ship, the Iceland, might leave Liverpool for Spitzbergen, without the blimp, within two weeks. He said he was to be of possible assistance to Amundsen. When his airship was ready, Al-garsson would fly from Liverpool to Spitzbergen, join his ship there and then undertake his Polar flight.

If it becomes apparent that Amundsen is in trouble, the icelander believes that by flying direct to Spitzbergen he can save ten days which might be vital in a rescue.

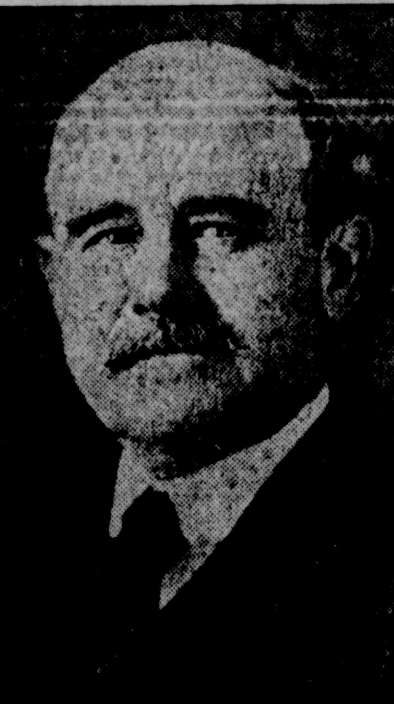

Al-garsson's plan would be to make straight for the Pole from Spitzbergen and proceed thence to Cape Columbia keeping a continuous lookout for Amundsen's sledges. He does not believe he would be able to pick up the Amundsen party if he found them, as the blimp would have lost considerable gas after a long flight, but he could supply them with food and other stores.

Oslo, Norway, May 26—A telegraph received here today by the Shipping Gazette from Spitzbergen said the explorer Amundsen had not returned from his North Pole flight this morning. Weather conditions were less favorable, it was reported.

The Afterpost expresses gratitude at the American interest in the fate of Captain Amundsen and his party, and the proposals that an auxiliary expedition be sent from the United States.

Drowned Self

Rockford—After Rock river Sunday had yielded the body of 17-year-old Bertha Newton, ending the four-day search for the missing Roscoe high school girl, Willis L. Newton, her father, demanded that local authorities conduct a searching investigation into the circumstances of her suicide.

Bertha, who disappeared Thursday morning after she had been reprimanded by her father for remaining out until 3 a. m., is believed to have leaped to death that afternoon from the bridge at Roscoe. Her algebra book was found Friday on the river bank, apparently just where she had laid it before ending her life.

Accuses Married Men
Grief over his daughter's death was mingled with bitterness toward certain Rockford and Roscoe married men, when Mr. Newton learned that her body had been recovered.

He charged that these men had been instrumental in keeping his daughter out late at night, and demanded that Coroner Fred C. Olson and State's Attorney William D. Knight investigate their associations with the girl. It was reported that several interurban trainmen were to be questioned during the investigation.

PRESIDENT BURTON OF UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO IS CALLEDWas One of Leaders of College Executives in United States

Chicago, May 26—(AP)—President Ernest Dewitt Burton of the University of Chicago, died at 9:41 a. m. today at the Presbyterian Hospital.

Ernest Dewitt Burton, president of the University of Chicago, had a career typical of the tendency in primarity intellectual bent for positions of administrative responsibility.

Originally a student of New Testament Interpretation, President Burton developed throughout his career the qualities of an executive and when, at the age of 67, he became acting president of the University of Chicago, a few months later president, he proved himself fully equipped for the leadership of a university of the first rank.

Son of Clergyman.
President Burton was born February 4, 1858 in Granville, Ohio, the son of the Rev. Nathan Smith Burton, a Baptist clergyman, and of Sarah J. Burton. After his graduation from Denison University in 1876, he attended the Rochester Theological Seminary, from which he received the degree of Bachelor of Divinity in 1882.

In 1883 he was called to the Newton Theological Institution. Three years later he was made professor and held that chair until 1892 when he was called to the University of Chicago, then just established.

He was a leader of the Baptist denomination. He was at one time chairman of the board of education of the Northern Baptist Convention and chairman of the board of directors of the American Baptist Missionary Society. He was intimately concerned with the cause of foreign missions as well as with missionary and social problems in America. Among other activities he was secretary of the Institute of Social and Religious Research.

Member First Faculty.
When President William R. Harper organized the notable faculty which began work in the first year of the University of Chicago, Mr. Burton became one of that early group. He became head of the department of New Testament and early Christian literature. Several books came from his pen, the result of intensive study of the New Testament, illuminating the meaning and beauty of those early Christian writings. Besides teaching and writing, he undertook and carried on for more than twelve years editorial work on such journals as the Biblical World and the American Journal of Theology.

One of Dr. Burton's greatest services was performed as oriental educational commissioner for the University which resulted in passing the year of 1905 in China and Japan and studying educational needs there. In 1921 he was made chairman of the Oriental Educational Commission.

In 1910, he was appointed to the difficult post of director of libraries and after Harry Pratt Judson succeeded Dr. Harper as president, and upon the death of the latter, Professor Burton served as acting president when President Judson found it necessary to be absent from his tasks.

When President Judson retired, the trustees selected Professor Burton for the post in July 1923. Almost immediately he began the outlining of plans for greatly improving the efficiency of the University in all departments and for enlarging its resources and activities.

In 1923 Dr. Burton married Frances Mary Townsend of Rochester, N. Y., a daughter, Margaret, survives with the widow.

Children Feign Sickness
Excite Their Teachers

Chicago, Ill., May 26—(AP)—Two or three pupils of the eighth grade at the Blaine Public School fainted today, supposedly the result of their exertions at play in the school yard, and a number of others toppled over to excite the teachers, firemen reported today after rushing resuscitating machines to the school in the belief that a large number had been overcome by gas.

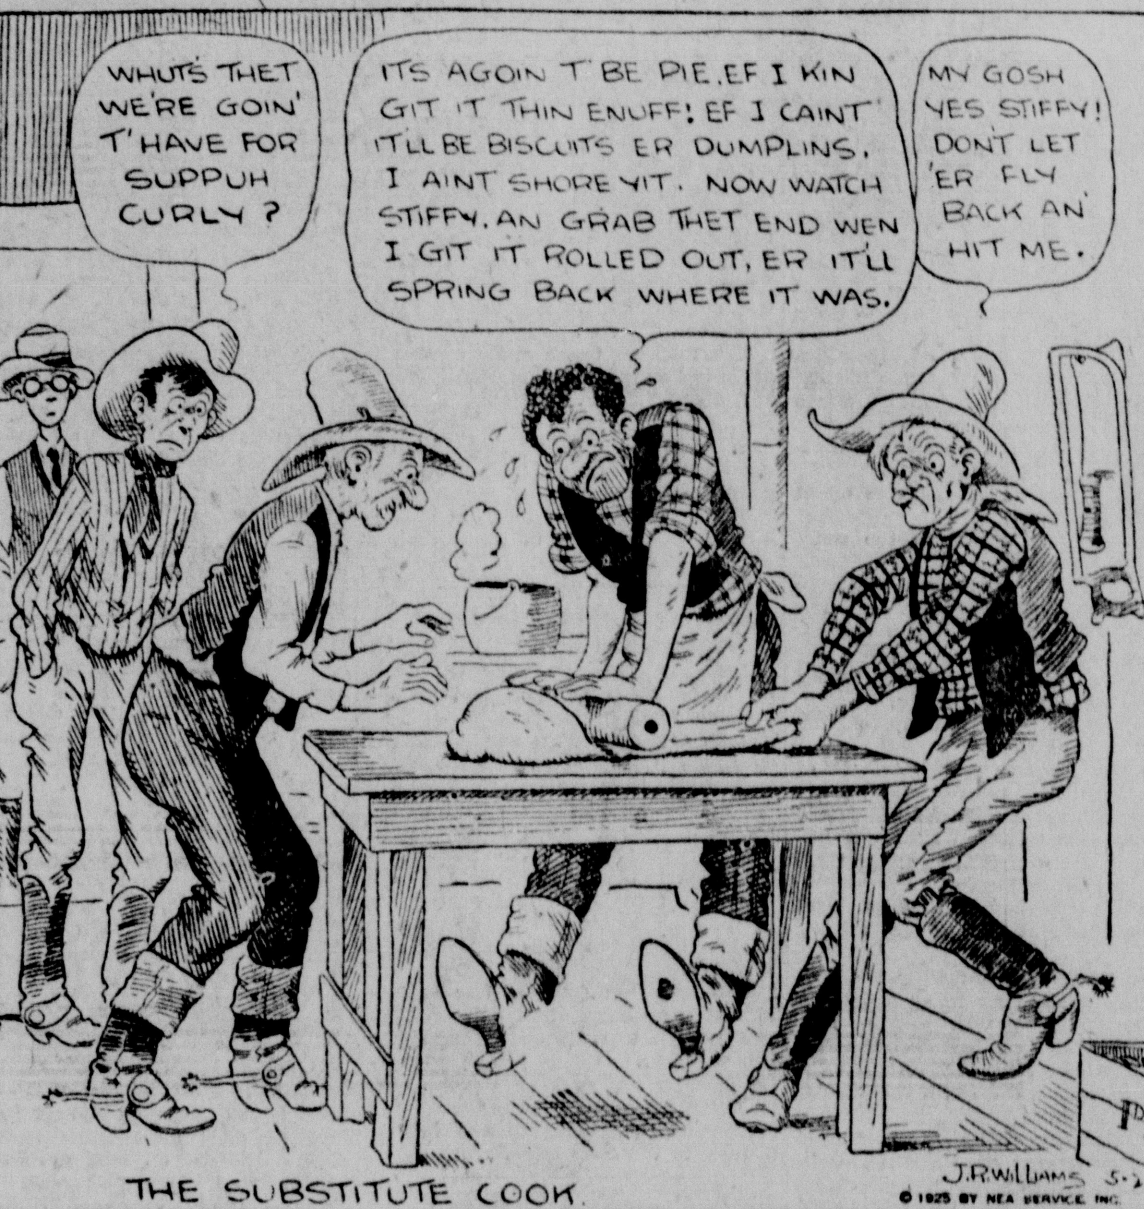

It was first reported that a gas main had broken in the vicinity and that 15 pupils had been overcome but Battalion Chief Oswald later said that "a couple of the children fainted and others feigned illness to excite their teachers."

Physicians and fire squads raced to the school building on the first report, which was of an alarming nature and, according to officials of the board of education, found that a few of the children had fainted as a result of entering the warm school after over-exerting themselves in the school yard.

Revision of Freight

Rates on Grain Urged

Washington, May 26—Extensive revision of freight rates on grain and food products moving from Rocky Mountain territory to the Mississippi territory east was recommended to the Interstate Commerce Commission today by the Examiners.

A second tentative report on grain rates was filed by examiners proposing that revisions of the schedules to Chicago to a considerable number of Iowa shipping points should be made. The report said that the existing rates are preferential to St. Louis and in part of Kansas City and suggested that a distance scale should be applied to equalize the charges.

RUM NAVY ON GREAT LAKES
NOW PLANNEDFleets on East and West Coasts Also to be Augmented

BULLETIN

Washington, May 26—(AP)—Extension of the operations of the dry fleet to the west coast and the northern lake frontier and then a converging movement on liquor law violators up the inland rivers, is planned by prohibition officials.

Commissioner Haynes asserted today that "many problems were being worked out," which he declined to discuss on the ground that "a little premature publicity might destroy months of planning and hard work."

E. C. Yellowley, chief of general prohibition agents, announced that a fleet of twelve fast chasers would be ready within thirty days to reinforce the Detroit river forces operating between Lakes Erie and Huron. The situation there was described as serious with from thirty to forty boats needed to furnish an adequate patrol.

Chicago, May 26—(AP)—The government's "rum navy" is to be augmented on three fronts—the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Great Lakes, coincident with reports from New York that five large liquor-laden ships had left the blockade area of the eastern coast.

Lincoln C. Andrews, chief of federal prohibition enforcement announced at El Paso that plans had been laid to expand the enforcement on the Atlantic to 100 or more craft.

Mr. Andrews also said that the sea prohibition forces on the Pacific coast would be enlarged to make available to the coast guard at least one boat for every liquor smuggling ship off shore. The enforcement chief, who was in El Paso as a member of the Mexican-American border commission, departed for New York, to superintend the speeding up of prohibition activities there.

It likewise became known that increased activity against rum runners on the Great Lakes and particularly along the Detroit river, was in prospect with the arrival at Detroit of J. T. Breerton of Chicago, who was expected to take charge of the government's dry navy on inland waters.

Activity also was reported on the gulf, with three armed coast guard cutters enroute from Pensacola, Fla., to Biloxi, Miss., where they will make a base.

Success of the rum blockade in the Atlantic was seen in the reduction of rum ships of the various fronts from eleven to six ships over the week end and the sale of two former rum running tugs to a towing company.

Loan Bank in Chicago

Held Up This Morning

Chicago, May 26—(AP)—Diamonds and jewelry of an estimated value of between $100,000 and $150,000 were taken by three robbers who held up three employees in the Adolph Gastman Loan Bank in the heart of the downtown district today.

The vaults had been opened and the employees were arranging the window and show case displays when the robbers entered, drawing their revolvers.

"March back there, boys," one of the robbers commanded and sent the trio of employees to a rear room where they were bound.

Then the robbers helped themselves to the diamonds and jewelry and escaped with their loot.

BULLETIN

Philadelphia, May 26—(AP)—Upon request of Chicago authorities, a police magistrate today issued a fugitive warrant for Robert H. White, missing witness in the Shepherd trial in Chicago, who is believed to be in Philadelphia. State's Attorney Crowe of Chicago informed Philadelphia police that a warrant was in the hands of the Chicago police, charging White with larceny of the motor car in which he disappeared.

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Chicago, May 26—The discharge of a juror, breaking the first panel obtained in the trial of William D. Shepherd, charged with murder, and the jury tampering charges brought a double sensation in Judge Lynch's court in the criminal courts building today.

"We have information that must be investigated and should be investigated before a jury is sworn in," State's Attorney Crowe said in answering Defense Counsel Stewart's demands that Crowe be stopped from further inquiry as to possible jury tampering.

Harold Miller, 22, the youngest man on the jury and a member of the first panel of the four and the only one sworn in, broke the panel when he confided to the court in the presence of the defendant and his counsel that he had an opinion in the case and was opposed to capital punishment. He was discharged, leaving only three jurors in the box.

Judge Overrules Defense

The second high point of the morning was recorded when Attorney Stewart appealed to Judge Lynch to call a halt on Crowe's jury-tampering inquiry. Judge Lynch, however, agreed with the state's attorney that the court was not being interfered with by action of the state's attorney in questioning veniremen who had been excused from jury service.

Twenty-six men were questioned in the state's attorney's office today, but the investigation is said to have resulted in no evidence of jury tampering.

W. W. O'Brien and W. S. Stewart, defenders of Shepherd, have been put under investigation by State's Attorney Crowe, in his efforts to determine if there have been attempts to "fix" prospective jurors in the Shepherd case.

An inquiry into all cases conducted by Shepherd's lawyers in the last six months was ordered by the prosecutor after receipt of a letter from Robert White, missing witness, which contained charges that he had been forced by defense attorneys to make an affidavit in behalf of Shepherd. White, claimed also by the state as an important witness, wrote from Philadelphia declaring he had been forced to flee for his life. A detective was sent to the Pennsylvania city last night to return White here for the trial.

Mr. Crowe announced that even the wives of jurors in the Stewart O'Brien cases and members of their families would be interrogated by his office.

Express Resentment

James C. Callan, politician, whose case for alleged attempts to fix a venireman is now pending, will be arrested on eight warrants he is seen in the criminal courts building, the state's attorney declared, in announcing that he intended to make jury fixing in the building "so precarious that no one will want to try it."

Attorneys Stewart and O'Brien expressed resentment with Crowe's plan.

"We welcome any investigation that any one wants to make," Stewart said. "It is no hardship upon us to have an investigation conducted, but it is a hardship upon honest jurors who retailed that the investigation was ordered only to 'intimidate the jurors in the present case' because the state realized it had no case against his client."

Mr. Stewart also asserted White had signed the affidavit in question of his own volition. It declared the case against Shepherd was a frame up.

MAY HAVE LANDED

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Seattle, Wash., May 26.—Captain Admundsen may already have landed on the northern coast of Alaska but it may be weeks before the world will know, persons familiar with the region, pointed out here today.
The ice in the Arctic Ocean is just breaking up. No vessels having wireless communication are known to be north of Nome.
The farthest north radio station is at Kotzebue, 200 miles north of Nome and about 1,300 miles from the North Pole.
Between Point Barrow, which is the northern most tip of Alaska, and approximately 450 nautical miles nearer the Pole than Nome and the Pole is a vast "blind spot" of more than a million square miles.

Attorney General to be

Speaker Here July Fourth
Attorney General Oscar E. Carlsstrom of Toledo has accepted an invitation to be present in Dixon July Fourth and deliver an address at the celebration and the auspices of the county

mittee in charge of the celebration sent a representative to the Attorney General of the state and extend the invitation. Word of the acceptance of the invitation was received this morning.

Little Frost Damage Last

Night Has Been Reported
Chicago, May 26.—(AP)—Crops and fruit which escaped the damaging freeze and frosts of Sunday night in the Midwest suffered no further damage last night except in sections of Wisconsin and northern Indiana, reports received here today indicated.
General over the central stations, a recession in the cold of Sunday was setting in with weather forecasts of slovely rising temperatures.
Aside from killing frosts in northern Wisconsin last night and further killing frost in the South Bend, Ind., territory where the damage Sunday was estimated at probably $100,000, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, Minnesota, Nebraska and Ohio reported no further damage. All Kentucky temperatures were above freezing and although there was a light frost, the fruit was not harmed.

Clifford Buzzard, Dixon boy who suffered a fractured skull and other injuries, when his Ford "Hoodoo" Special went through the fence at the McQua race track there Sunday afternoon, is resting as well as can be expected. It will be several days before the outcome of his injuries can be predicted.

DISCUSS RELIEF FOR AMUNDSEN'S POLE EXPEDITION

Nome, and a personal friend of Admundsen's declared today.
"In case a landing is made at Point Barrow, it would probably take at least two weeks to get word to Kotzebue or Nome," Mr. Maynard said.
From Wainwright, which was Admundsen's former starting place, it might be possible to hear in about ten days unless he chooses to wait along the Alaskan north coast until some vessel with a wireless apparatus should make its way north through ice floes on a trading ship.
"This is possible, but would not be accomplished much before a week or two."

DON'T LOSE YOUR PLUCK—
When things are running crosswise, and the engine's out of gear, when the road is rough and rocky, and the sky is far from clear, when you're plainly up against it and you're sure out of luck, that's the time to use your courage and to show your stock of pluck.

Most any one can travel on a road that's smooth and clear, and any one can get there if he only has to steer.
But when the motor's balky and you're running in the muck, if you're ever going to get there you must call upon your pluck.

There's no thrill in easy sailing when the skies are clear and blue.
There's no joy in merely doing things that any one can do.
But there is some satisfaction that is mighty sweet to take when you reach a destination that you thought you'd never make.

So when everything's against you and your plans are going wrong, just face the situation and keep moving right along—
Don't sit down and wall and whimper, even though you may be stuck.
You're not absolutely helpless if you still possess your pluck.
—Author Unknown.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—
A Dustless Duster.
A very useful dustless duster which cleans without polishing may be made by saturating cheese cloth with kerosene and hanging in the open air until it no longer feels wet to the touch.

Saving Eggs.
In custards and sauces, you can omit all eggs over two and substitute two tablespoons of cornstarch for each egg omitted.

Menus for a Family

Tested by SISTER MARY.

Breakfast:
Stewed rhubarb, scrambled eggs, broiled bacon, crisp bran toast, milk, coffee.
Luncheon:
Baked new cabbage, brown bread, cup custard, plain cookies, milk tea.

Dinner:
Pot roast of beef, potatoes roasted with meat, brown gravy, creamed new carrots, spinach salad, cream puffs with strawberry cream filling.

Some authorities on the feeding of young children consider a "brown gravy" one of the forbidden foods. If the gravy is rich with fat, heated to intense heat for the purpose of browning, it most assuredly is forbidden. But if the gravy is browned by the meat juices as in a pot roast and slightly thickened with flour, well cooked before serving, it makes a delicious and popular dish for kiddies.

Baked New Cabbage.
Four cups finely shredded cabbage, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 1/2 cups milk, 1/2 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, 4 tablespoons buttered crumbs.

Let cabbage stand in cold water for 1 hour before mixing. Pour boiling water over cabbage and let stand 1 minute. Drain and plunge into very cold water and let stand 2 minutes. Drain. Put into 2 quarts rapidly boiling water filled with 2 teaspoons salt and boil uncovered for ten minutes. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly. When thick and smooth season with salt and pepper. Add drained cabbage, and turn into a buttered baking dish. Cover with a buttered-crumbs and brown in a hot oven.

Strawberry Cream Filling.
One-half cup butter, 1 1/4 cups powdered sugar, 1 egg white, 1 1/2 cups strawberries cut in halves.

Beat butter to a cream and beat in 1 cup sugar. Beat until light. Beat white of egg until stiff and dry with a wire whisk. Beat in remaining sugar. Fold egg mixture into butter mixture and add berries. Mix carefully and use.

CYNTHIA GREY SAYS—

Suppose that you are a girl just out of school.

It is not necessary for you to work. Yet you feel that you want to be independent—like so many modern girls do. And so you go into the business world.

But are you independent?
"Believe me all this talk about gaining independence by going into the business world is sheer bluff," says a young British woman who has been very successful in business.

"I fail to see any independence in being at the beck and call of a man, in strap-hanging six days a week, and poor tea shop luncheons. You don't find the gaiety and change in work that you expect. The girl at home is much more independent."

"But more than that, every girl, no matter how independent she may want to be, dreams of marriage. And believe me, most men prefer the home girl over one who has asserted her independence."

Of course, there are many girls who feel they must work, but if you have the opportunity to choose, it's true you will find more independence at home than in the business world.

ALTAR AND ROSARY SOCIETY SEWING CLUB—

Resume of Golden Wedding Anniversary

(Contributed.)

Sunday, May 24th, 1925, marked a very important event in the history of the lives of Judge James W. Watts and wife when a number of relatives met at their home to join with them and family in celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, which occurred in Ashton, Ill.

Those from out-of-town were Mrs. Sarah Blocher, Mrs. Watts' sister, from Adrian, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. Bart Orner and son, Edwin, of Ashton, Mo.; and Mrs. Joseph H. Williams of Rochelle, Mo.; and Mrs. John Drummond of Washington Grove, Ogle County; Mrs. Anna Tilton and son, Everett, and Lois Mead of Oregon; Aunt Susan Williams of Washington Grove, Mo.; Mrs. Watts' sister and her husband, Samuel and Louise McRoberts of Oregon; L. Booth and wife, and her sister, Miss Floy Sweet.

These with the members of Mr. Watts' family made a jolly company of twenty-seven. In his family there are: James W. Watts and wife and daughter, Mrs. Clea Bunnell, and two grand sons, Willard and Elwin. Willard with his friend, Mrs. Hazel Woods; Elwin and wife, Lydia, and their three children, Elwin, Jr., Marshall and Constant.

On Monday evening another party, consisting of the members of the Thursday Sewing Circle of which Mrs. Watts is a true and devoted member, gathered at 6:30 in the nature of a surprise and also to celebrate their Golden Wedding anniversary.

A general good time was enjoyed by every one present. The decorations were Poenias, Calendulas, Iris, Snapdragons, Roses and Carnations. A very handsome gold vase and other valuable and pretty presents were given them as tokens of love and respect.

As mementoes of the happy event, Miss Mabel Smith rendered two very excellent violin selections, accompanied by Mrs. Will Smith at the piano, and was greeted with hearty applause. Mrs. Robert Anderson led in the singing of the song, "Count Your Blessings, Name Them One by One," also accompanied by Mrs. Smith at the piano.

Following which Professor Neighbour delivered a very appropriate speech for the occasion in which he recounted many reminiscences of his association with the Judge. After which the Judge replied in his usual deliberate and mild manner. Mrs. Watts also responded feelingly with emotional expressions of thankfulness and gratitude.

Professor Neighbour read a letter of congratulations written by Hon. John P. Devine, addressed to Mrs. Louisa L. Smith in response to an invitation to be present. It is as follows:

May 25, 1925.
Mrs. Louisa L. Smith,
Dixon, Ill.

Dear Mrs. Smith:
I desire to acknowledge your kind invitation to be present at the surprise supper to be given this evening at 6:30 by neighbors and friends, who are celebrating the 50th Wedding Anniversary of Judge and Mrs. J. W. Watts. I regret exceedingly that an unusually important session of the Legislature, which requires my presence at Springfield at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning makes it impossible for me to be present.

I would like to be present personally

Bright Red on This Frock

Hands of bright red kasha and red buttons trim this sport frock of natural colored kasha, that fulfills every requirements of the sportswoman. A novel effect is achieved by the side panels which form the pockets and break the monotony of the plain expanse of cloth.

ly to join with friends and neighbors in extending congratulations to the Judge and Mrs. Watts. My acquaintance with Judge Watts dates back over a quarter of a century, first meeting him as an instructor in the Law Department at Dixon College, and under his tutelage completing my law course. I voice the sentiment of all who are familiar with him as a teacher, that he was gifted with an unusual ability in aiding students to acquire legal knowledge. This has been thoroughly demonstrated by the fact that his students have been successful, one, at least having been elected Governor of a State, several having been elected to positions as Supreme Judge, and a great many having been elected as District and Circuit Judges. I consider him the best common-law lawyer I ever knew. His standing as a lawyer has been recognized by members of his own bar, who have elected him Master-in-Chancery, which from the standpoint of property rights, is the most important office in the county. His ability has also been recognized by the Supreme Court of this state when he was appointed to the Board of Law Examiners. He is a man of high character who has always adhered strictly to legal ethics. He is an honor to his profession and highly revered by every member of the Lee County Bar.

My close association with him for the past twenty-five years has ripened into as deep a friendship as can exist between men, and outside of my own family, there is no one that I esteem more highly or am more deeply indebted to. I have known Mrs. Watts nearly as long as I have known the Judge and she is a wonderful woman, a kind mother and a most excellent helpmate, and I am frank to say that without her assistance, it would have been impossible for the Judge to have attained the high position which he occupies among his legal associates, his friends and neighbors.

Trusting that the Judge and Mrs. Watts may celebrate many more anniversaries, I am

Sincerely,
John P. Devine.

A short historical sketch of our host, written by Lyman Booth, was also read by the Professor as follows: W. Watts is a very distinguished member of the Lee County Bar, and has been engaged in general practice at Dixon since 1856. He has been favored with a large representative clientele; in addition there to he has become widely known as an educator of marked ability, having been Dean of the Law Department of the Dixon college for many years.

He was born Nov. 18th, 1850, at Middleton, Vigo County, Ind. He was two years of age when his parents, Thomas and Ann Watts, moved from the place of his nativity to Illinois, settling on a farm in Lafayette township, Ogle county, in 1853, where he grew to manhood. His education was acquired in the public schools. When but a small boy he was deprived, by death, of the counsel of his father. He was, however, fortunate in that his mother successfully managed the farm, and reared her children to a high degree of respectability and usefulness, and he especially became familiar with the arduous duties and labors connected with farm life. His industry and frugality has placed the title of the old farm home in his name.

In 1869 he began teaching in the country schools of Lee County. In 1872 he entered the school at Ashton, where he continued his studies until the fall of 1874. He then decided to leave the schoolroom and to prepare for a remunerative and active profession, and accordingly entered the law department of the University of Michigan, from which he was graduated with high honors on the thirtieth day of March, 1876.

Assiduously he applied his energies to the mastery of the principles of Jurisprudence and was well qualified for the practice of his profession on his return to Ashton, at which time he opened an office where he remained for a period of nine years. Being anxious to widen his field of labors he moved to Dixon, Nov. 5th, 1886. Since which time he has made this city his home, and has engaged in the general practice of law, and his ability has given him an honorable position among the foremost members

For the June Graduate

The legal profession demands a high order of ability, combined with talent, tact, learning, patience and persistent industry. The lawyer to be successful must have an analytical mind. Possessing all these necessary attributes James W. Watts has long been considered one of the prominent representatives of the Dixon bar, and his ability as an educator, in his chosen field, is widely acknowledged.

Wild Cat School Held Closing Picnic

The Wild Cat school, taught by Miss Alice Erickson, closed a most successful year with a picnic held at Lowell park Saturday. Sixty patrons and friends enjoyed the delicious dinner served at noon with ice cream as the dessert course. All present had a most enjoyable day. Mildred Brierston and Harold Chambers have not been absent or tardy from the school this season. Evelyn Swords and Dorothy Savage of the second grade are to be commended on the number of perfect spelling lessons. Miss Erickson has been retained by the board of directors of the school to teach next year.

COMMITTEE APPRECIATES COUNTRY CLUB

The Rest Room committee appreciates very much the courtesy of the Country Club in not holding the dance in connection with their dinner on Thursday evening, thereby allowing members the opportunity of attending the play, "The Little Lady," at the Dixon Theatre. A dinner-dance was scheduled by the club, and the dinner will be held, but the dance has been postponed out of courtesy to those in charge of the production of the play. A good patronage for the play is solicited as the proceeds will be used for the benefit of the Rest Room.

Continue Attempt to Prove Lopez Imposter

Minneapolis, Minn., May 26—(AP)—In its effort to prove that Arthur Lopez-Frazier who seeks to establish his identity at Arthur Frazier, word war veteran, is an imposter, government attorneys had at their disposal today additional witnesses who were prepared to add their stories to several others refuting Lopez-Frazier's claims.

Accepted by the parents of Arthur Frazier as their son, the government, nevertheless, has produced numerous witnesses who contend the "mystery man" is Arthur Lopez, a Mexican posing as Frazier.

WAR ON THE LAKES.

As the alcoholic flood is swept back on the Atlantic coast it starts breaking over the northern border. There is a sudden growth of smuggling activity on the Great Lakes. And that brings international complications.

The government naturally wants to fight off the liquor deluge on the lakes, as on the seacoast and the land border. It seems impossible without strengthening the armed forces on the lakes. The government has planned to act accordingly. But Canadians rise up in wrath and alarm, insisting that any such action would break the celebrated Rush-Bagot treaty, which has kept peace on the Great Lakes for 107 years.

By that treaty, each nation is restricted to about half a dozen armed vessels on the entire chain of lakes, of not more than 100 tons each, and mounting not more than one 18-pound gun. If the United States puts a regular fleet on the lakes, though merely for prohibition enforcement, the Canadians say, Canada will have to increase its navy. Thus the venerable compact will go by the board and naval competition will begin between these two friendly neighbors.

They are especially indignant at the proposal of the American enforcement fleet to "shoot first and investigate afterward" when suspicious craft entering American waters refuse to heed signals and warnings.

But manifestly, if enforcement craft are forbidden to shoot at smuggling craft, they can not stop smuggling. And surely this country has a right to fight smugglers.

It would be a great pity to abrogate that treaty. It would be a greater pity if Canada were allowed to deluge the states with unlawful liquor. Instead of getting so mad about it, why doesn't Canada safeguard the treaty by taking hold of the situation herself, and try to control her own border rum-runners instead of protecting them?

We have been on friendly relations with Canada for more than a century. Have we not established with Canada that we have and will continue to have good faith with her so long as she reciprocates with good faith and friendliness? We are ready to assure her that any fleet we put on the lakes will maintain the spirit of the Rush-Bagot treaty and will be for the suppression of smuggling only. Is Canada in such strong sympathy with her liquor business that she is disposed to recognize her liquor smugglers as increasing her foreign commerce in a manner she must protect? If not, then we should be able to reach an amicable understanding with her as to our right to protect ourselves against smugglers.

DEAR MONEY.

Rents are cruelly high in Washington. This works hardship on public employees and is one of the things that make it difficult for the government to get the most efficient help. It is both a private and a public problem.

President Coolidge some months ago proposed government control of rents in the District of Columbia, after the manner of public rent control in New York, as the most direct way to remedy the evil. Secretary Hoover has another suggestion: It is not merely grasping landlords, he explains, that make rents high. Rents may be high because building costs are high; and that is largely due to expensive financing of new construction.

Washington money lenders, he says, often demand 20 percent or more on second mortgages. He wants to bring money rates down.

There is no question that cheaper rates for building loans would bring cheaper rents, in Washington or anywhere else, and promote home ownership. The cost of money for such purposes, in a time when cash and credit in this country are supposed to be very plentiful—and are plentiful, for other purposes—is something that most Americans can not understand.

WEATHER.

How far ahead can the weather be accurately predicted? Only a few days, and then subject to the law of averages. The airplane and radio, however, are proving such valuable helps that the Weather Bureau says long-range weather predictions (far in advance) may not be impossible. Meantime, nature predicts the kind of winter and other seasons months ahead—to anyone with eyes and knowledge.

This year, looks like a mild winter. If so, chances are that next winter will be severe. Nature evens things up, in temperature, over five-year periods.

HOT.

Ten seconds devoted to science: Our sun's temperature is only 10,000 degrees. Nature's "hottest heat" (some of the stars) is only 40,000 degrees. A temperature of 60,000 degrees is produced in a laboratory by Dr. Wendt of Pennsylvania State College. Merely scientific play? No. Dr. Wendt, using this terrific heat, hopes to release the stupendous energy locked up in atoms. Even if he does, the discovery's value will depend on the cost of the process. It must be cheaper than coal.

BY CHESTER H. ROWELL

The harm is not in Fundamentalism. That is a doctrine once historically respectable, whose chief proponents are models of piety and virtue.

If it seems narrow and ignorant to better informed persons, so are most of the things that most people think on most subjects.

The world has survived too much ignorance to be menaced by so innocent a form of it as this. The trouble comes when it is sought, by law, or other compulsion, to enforce these limitations on others.

It is a delicate enough matter even to enforce knowledge on ignorance, as the public safety sometimes requires us to do in matters of public health and sanitation.

To enforce ignorance on knowledge is unconditionally intolerant. No other liberty or advancement is worth much, or can long survive, when knowledge is not free.

The ages when Authority censored Knowledge have been ages of oppression and stagnation. And it makes little difference whether the authority proceeds from king, or priest, or people.

"The truth shall make you free." Nothing else can. And it is not Truth unless it is free.

Both forms of Fundamentalism, the theological and the scientific, are rampant in every day's news. Baptists object to a Baptist church that wants him calling Dr. Fosdick confessedly one of the most inspiring leaders of religious life in America.

One Presbyterian assembly wants to expel the whole Presbytery of New York. If a militant faction could have its way, nearly all the teachers of religion in all the great institutions of Christian scholarship in the world, practically all its recognized Biblical scholars, and most of the distinguished clergymen of most of the Christian denominations would be expelled from their churches on the ground that they are not Christian.

Certainly, Dean Inge, one of the highest dignitaries of the Church of England, would have to go. He said, just before leaving, that he had heard little of Fundamentalism while in America, because he had associated mostly with intelligent people. If this faction is in the majority, and has historic doctrine on its side, it has the theoretic right to say that those who wish to preach modern doctrine must be driven out to found new churches to do it in.

That might even be a good thing. But the price of it would be the destruction of great historic institutions.

IF NOT ONE CHURCH, THEN ANOTHER

The educational part of it is more serious. For the law accepts us all.

If modernism can not be preached in one church, there are others. But if science can not be taught in the schools of the state, there is nowhere else to teach it.

It is therefore fortunate that the Tennessee law has attracted so much attention. A test case will determine whether bald literalism shall compulsorily supplant the consensus of informed conclusion.

If it does, it should be also necessary to teach that the sun moves around the earth, that the earth is square, and has a roof over it that insanity is a demonic possession, and that witchcraft must be punishable by death.

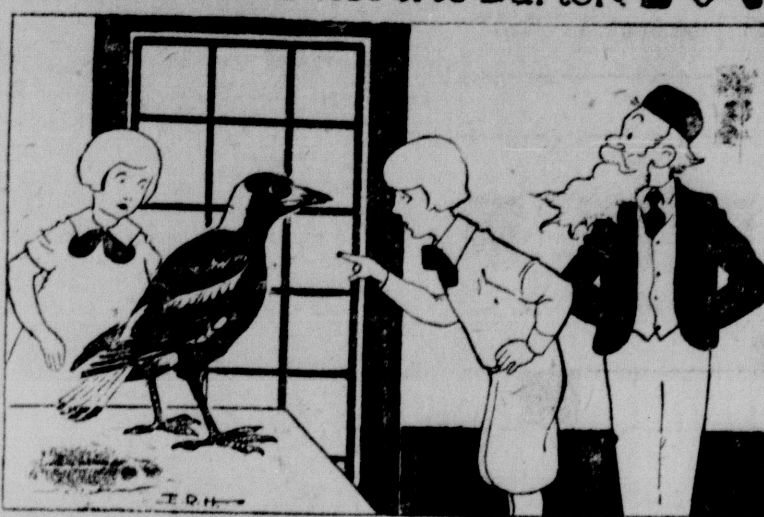

Taken with the same absurd literalism, the Bible teaches all these things. Astronomy and penology are forbidden, as well as evolution.

Let Mr. Bryan and his cohorts, have the courage of their convictions, and demand these things, too.

"You must have left your manners at home," said Nick.

"Haven't any and never had," laughed the bird.

Nobody had anything to say to this so he went on. "I just came because I thought I would be safe here."

"Ah, ha!" exclaimed Doctor Bill with a wise look. "So that's it. I rather thought I smelled a mouse."

the living? Sometimes we all side with the dead.

An Italian-American school girl in New York started a protest against motor launches in Venice which reached Mussolini, and brought his assurance that no such step was contemplated.

And now comes the Roosevelt Memorial Association and protests against the Oyster Bay church doing as most churches do—building a modern church for the use of its members.

Doubtless, both are right. In this gasoline age, the Venetians are the only ones who owe it to the sentiment of the world to be as slow as their ancestors.

And a church that once had Roosevelt as a member must never be any better than it was for him. There are exceptions to all rules.

"Go on and tell, I don't care," croaked Mr. Magpie impudently.

"He stole—he stole—an earring," said Mrs. Magpie timidly.

Everybody looked surprised, even Doctor Bill laughed.

"Don't you think that it is a terrible thing to do?" asked the little lady bird.

"We are pet magpies and our mistress is so kind to us! My husband sits on her window sill until she "Come on home then," Mrs. Magpie said to her husband.

"I can't," said he. "I forgot where I put the earring."

"You took it to the kitchen and dropped it into the bread dough. Cook

SYNOPSIS

Malone, a London newspaper reporter, rejected by the girl he loves because he has no heroic deeds to his credit, appeals to his editor for a dangerous assignment, and is sent to interview Professor Challenger, who has recently returned from South America with a story, which no one believes, of the existence there of prehistoric animals. By way of proof he shows Malone a sketch of a stegosaurus, which he had found among the possessions of a dead explorer, Maple White; some photographs, and a piece of the wing of a pterodactyl. At a scientific lecture that night Challenger calls for volunteers for an expedition to test the truth of his assertions. . . . This one foggy morning young Malone finds himself a member of a party of three setting out for South America. The other two are Professor Summerlee, a scientist, and Lord John Roxton, well known explorer. Challenger has given them sealed instructions, and at the time and place specified the envelope is opened. It contains a blank sheet of paper!

The shadow of a squat figure had stolen across the patch of sunlight. That voice! That monstrous breadth of shoulder! We sprang to our feet with a gasp of astonishment as Challenger, in a round, boyish straw hat with a colored ribbon—Challenger, with his hands in his jacket pockets and his canvas shoes daintily pointing as he walked—appeared in the open space before us. He threw back his head, and there he stood in the golden glow with all his old Assyrian luxuriance of beard, all his native insolence of drooping eyelids and intolerant eyes.

"I fear," he said, taking out his watch, "that I am a few minutes too late. When I gave you this envelope I must confess that I had never intended that you should open it, for it had been my fixed intention to be with you before the hour. The unfortunate delay can be apportioned between a blundering pilot and an intrusive sandbank. I fear that it has given my colleague, Professor Summerlee, occasion to blaspheme."

"I am bound to say, sir," said Lord John, with some sternness of voice, "that your turning up is a considerable relief to us, for our mission seemed to have come to a premature end. Even now I can't for the life of me understand why you should have worked it in so extraordinary a manner."

Instead of answering, Professor Challenger entered, shook hands with myself and Lord John, bowed with ponderous insolence to Professor Summerlee, and sank back into a basket-chair, which creaked and swayed beneath his weight.

"Is all ready for your journey?" he asked.

"We can start tomorrow."

"Then so you shall. You need no chart of directions now, since you will have the inestimable advantage of my own guidance. From the first I had determined that I would myself preside over your investigation. The most elaborate charts would, as you will readily admit, be a poor substitute for my own intelligence and advice. As to the small ruse which I played upon you in the matter of the en-may be able to make an early start in the morning. My time is of value, and the same thing may be said, no doubt, in a lesser degree of your own. I propose, therefore, that we push on as rapidly as possible, until I have demonstrated what you have come to see."

Lord John Roxton has chartered a large steam launch, the Esmeralda, which was to carry us up the river. So far as climate goes, it was immaterial what time we chose for our expedition, as the temperature ranges from seventy-five to ninety degrees both summer and winter, with no appreciable difference in heat. In moisture, however, it is otherwise; from December to May is the period of the rains, and during this time the river slowly rises until it attains a height of nearly forty feet above its low-water mark. It floods the banks, extends in great lagoons over a monstrous waste of country, and forms a huge district, called locally the Gapo, which is for the most part too marshy for foot travel and too shallow for boating. About June the waters begin to fall, and are at their lowest at October or November. Thus our expedition was at the time of the dry season, when the great river and its tributaries were more or less in a normal condition.

The current of the river is a slight one, the drop being not greater than eight inches in a mile. No stream could be more convenient for navigation, since the prevailing wind is south-east, and sailing boats may make a continuous progress to the Peruvian frontier, dropping down again with the current. In our own case the excellent engines of the Esmeralda could disregard the sluggish flow of the stream, and we made as rapid progress as if we were navigating a stagnant lake.

For three days we steamed north-westwards up a stream which even here, a thousand miles from its mouth, was still so enormous that from its center the two banks were mere shadows upon the distant sky-line. On the fourth day after leaving Manao we turned into a tributary which at its mouth was little smaller than the main stream. It narrowed rapidly, however, and after two more days' steaming we reached an Indian village, where the Professor insisted that we should land, and that the Esmeralda should be sent back to Manao. We should soon come upon rapids, he explained, which would make its further use impossible. He added privately that we were now approaching the door of the unknown country, and that the fewer we took into our confidence the better it would be.

To this end also he made each of us give our word of honor that we should publish or say nothing which would give any exact clue as to the whereabouts of our travels, while the servants were all solemnly sworn to the same effect. It is for this reason that I am compelled to be vague in my narrative, and I would warn my readers that in any map or diagram which I may give the relation of places to each other may be correct, but the points of the compass are carefully confused, so that in no way can it be taken as an actual guide to the country.

Professor Challenger's reasons for secrecy may be valid or not, but we had no choice but to adopt them, for he was prepared to abandon the whole expedition rather than modify the conditions upon which he would guide us.

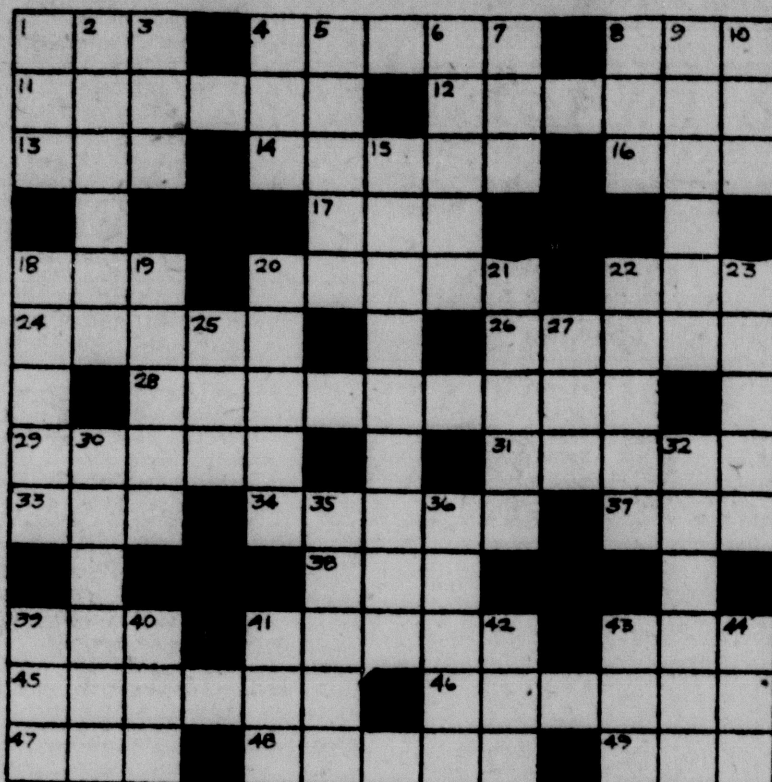

It was August 2nd when we snapped our last link with the outer world by bidding farewell to the Esmeralda. Since then four days have passed, during which we have engaged two large canoes from the Indians, made of so light a material (skins over a bamboo framework) that we should be able to carry them round any obstacle. These we have loaded with all our effects, and have engaged two additional Indians to help us in the navigation. I understand that they are the very two—Ataca and Ipetu by name—who accompanied Professor Challenger upon his previous journey. They appeared to be terrified at the prospect of repeating it over, but the chief has patriarchal powers in these countries, and if the bargain is good in his eyes the clansman has little choice in the matter.

So tomorrow we disappear into the unknown. This account I am transmitting down the river by canoe, and it may be our last word to those who are interested in our fate. I have, according to our arrangement, addressed it to you, my dear Mr. McArdle, and I leave it to your discretion to delete, alter, or do what you like with it. From the assurance of Professor Challenger's manner—and in spite of the continued scepticism of Professor Summerlee—I have no doubt that our leader will make good his statement, and that we are really on the eve of some most remarkable experiences.

[An Open Letter]

As a professional man your knowledge of human nature has peculiarly fitted you to appraise, quite accurately, the character and ability of a client, jury or judge, as well as your opponent.

Does not outward appearance yield favorable first impressions that are generally substantiated by investigation?

If this be true of others the rule is applicable to you, and other men of your profession.

Success is a matter of ability to be sure—but a successful appearance is no handicap—it inspires the confidence of others, and yourself, in your abilities.

Missing Five Years, Man Inherits Fortune

Eric, Pa., May 25.—(AP)—Missing more than five years, during which a countrywide search was instituted for him, Dr. Charles F. Hastings, heir to a $50,000 legacy left him by his mother, has been located in Erie where he was known as John Hugh, proprietor of a toy shop. As soon as he learned through newspapers that he was being sought Dr. Hastings identified himself to local authorities and is now in communication with his attorney in New York concerning the property left him by his mother, Mrs. Caroline F. Hastings, who died in Ithaca, N. Y., May 8.

Dr. Hastings had been an interne at the Homeopathic Hospital. He left home, he said, following a family disagreement about his career, and declared that he was now a business man, and proud of it. He passed the state examination to practice medicine after completing his internship. Business appealed to him, he said, and he preferred to be a member of the "blue shirt gang" rather than a professional man.

Foreign Police Chiefs Greeted by the President

Washington, May 25.—Police chiefs of foreign countries now touring the east, who failed to see President Coolidge Saturday when he became indisposed, were invited to call at the White House today just before their departure for Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The chiefs visited the district reformatory at Lorton, Va., yesterday, where the degree of freedom granted the prisoners moved Professor Salvatore D'Amico, director of the scientific police school of Rome to express his amazement.

"I've spent my life time studying criminals," he said. "But this is the first time I've ever seen them sing and make merry. This is the first time I've ever seen such a meal served and it is the first time I've ever seen a really successful jail without walls."

He described the prisoners as of exceptional character as the result of what can be done "by proper treatment" and expressed the belief that their equal is not to be found in Europe.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burton © 1925 NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY SO FAR:

GLORIA GORDON, beautiful flapper, married DICK GREGORY, struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage to fun and fine clothes . . . but no work or children.

She refuses to cook or keep house, and hires RANGHILD SWANSON to do it for her, although Dick says they can't afford a maid. And she swamps Dick with debts for her clothes and a new automobile.

Gloria becomes infatuated with STANLEY WAYBURN, an out-of-work actor. Her jazy friend, MAY SEYMOUR, begs Gloria not to be seen with Wayburn. May, herself, is snubbed everywhere because of her foolish love affair with JIM CAREWE.

Dick is seriously ill with pneumonia. During the slow days of his recovery, Gloria sees Wayburn constantly. He tells her he is leaving soon for New York. He needs money. Gloria borrows $200 of Dick's money from his secretary, MISS BRIGGS. She tells Miss Briggs she wants to spend the money during the yard and house for Dick.

Wayburn and Gloria go riding in her car, and it overturns in a ditch. Gloria, badly hurt, is rushed to the hospital. Wayburn disappears.

DR. SEYMOUR orders Dick away for a rest. His mother, who has been ill, plans to go with him and Gloria. Gloria tells Dick that if MOTHER GREGORY goes, she won't.

Shortly after her return from the hospital Gloria has a letter from Wayburn. Dick asks to see it.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

GLORIA could feel Wayburn's letter inside her blouse, where she had slipped it. It crackled against her flesh with every breath she drew.

"There really was nothing in it," she thought. "She couldn't show Dick, she was sure."

It was as harmless a letter, as ever had been written.

There was not a single word in it to suggest that it had been penned by a lover to the lady of his dreams.

Gloria pulled it from the top of her dress and handed it to Dick.

"Here, read it yourself," she said. "It's from Stanley Wayburn."

But Dick didn't read it. He didn't open it. He hardly touched it. . . . Just long enough to toss it down on the teakwood table at the end of theavenport.

His face was white under the light of the tall lamp that stood there.

"So?" he questioned. "My wife carries Wayburn's letter against her heart?"

Gloria laughed.

"Dick, you're absurd," she said. "I never thought of it's being against my heart. I stuck it into my blouse, so Ranghild wouldn't find it and read it."

"I see," Dick said. But his face was grim. He sat down in his arm chair, and filled his pipe. He picked up the book he was reading. Then he laid it down upon his knees.

"Gloria," he said abruptly. "The truth for once in your life—Are you or are you not in love with Wayburn?"

"I don't know," Gloria answered. She had asked herself that question a thousand times. And she never answered it the same way twice.

"That's nonsense," Dick went on impatiently. "You must know how you feel about him! . . . Tell me this: you don't care about me, and more, do you?"

GLORIA looked across the room at him with the calm eyes of the Sphinx, herself. But his question had set thoughts to buzzing like bees in her head.

How much did she care about Dick?

Would she miss him if he went away from her as she missed Stanley Wayburn?

She wondered.

She felt Dick as something true.

"I'm going away. When Mr. Gregory comes back . . . show him this letter."

worthy, honest and good beyond measure. Good all the way through. . . . That was Dick.

But did she love him? "I don't know, Dick," Gloria said at last.

She sat up straight, pulling herself together like a woman who had something to say and meant to say it now!

"I'll try to tell you how I feel about you, if I can, Dick," she said. "To begin with, I hate housework. I hate having to run this house for you. It makes me sick and tired. And sometimes I almost hate you for marrying me and turning me into a housewife."

Dick gave a short laugh.

"Bah!" he said. "You a housewife! That's pretty good. Gloria, you haven't done a day's housework in your whole life! How do you know whether you hate it or not?"

Gloria waved his words aside.

"Now don't interrupt me!" she snapped at him. "When I married you, I was awfully tired of office work. I was tired of playing around with fellows who didn't want to get married. . . . And you looked awfully good to me. See?"

Dick nodded.

"I see perfectly," he said. "You wanted to marry Wayburn, but he didn't want to marry you. I came along, and you thought I had a lot to offer. So you married me. Isn't that it?"

Gloria shook her head so that very curl on it quivered.

"No, no. That wasn't it," she said quickly. "I'm not such a gold digger as all that! But I knew you'd be awfully good to me if I married you. And . . . you know I did are for you, Dick, don't you?"

Dick puffed his pipe in silence. He raised his hand across his forehead, and wet with sweat.

"Was Wayburn ever in love with you?" he asked.

"I thought he was once," Gloria answered, "but I found out that he wasn't."

She got up and came across the room. I Dick. She sat down on the arm of his chair and put her face down against his hair.

"Dick," she said. "I know that Stan's whole body isn't worth your little finger. He's not good like you are. . . . But I do miss him! He's a lot of fun. I love to dance and jam around with him. He's my kind. . . ."

Dick held himself together hard. "All right, all right," he said. "I've heard all I can stand to hear about Wayburn. But he's gone now. Thank God! You and I can make a fresh start, can't we?"

"I hope so," Gloria answered uncertainly.

Dick pulled her down onto his knees and held her away from him by both arms. His eyes searched her face.

"Gloria," he said, "while I'm away these next two or three weeks, I want you to think things over. We've been married six months, and we've done nothing but bicker and quarrel. . . . I can't live like that. This Wayburn business has been the last straw. It's just about finished me!"

Gloria looked at him in surprise.

She didn't mind a good quarrel. She rather liked it.

In fact, she enjoyed a scene! It was exciting, if nothing more. She was excited now.

"I don't want you to live with me unless you love me," Dick went on. Gloria widened her eyes in astonishment.

"Do you mean to say you're going away and leave me at home alone, Dick Gregory?" she cried. She got up from his knees.

"I thought you said you didn't want to go?" Dick answered.

"I said I wouldn't go if your mother went with you," Gloria explained. "And you've just got to tell her she can't go with us!" She stamped her foot.

"I'm sorry, but she's made all her plans to go. She doesn't think for a minute that we don't want her."

Dick said anxiously. "How in the deuce can I tell her that we don't want her to go, sick as she is? It would break her heart."

Gloria smiled maliciously.

"All right, dearie," she said smoothly. "You go with your mother and leave me here alone, if you want to. . . . You do it, and believe me, you'll be sorry for it to your dying day!"

Dick groaned in despair.

"Oh, have a heart, Gloria," he said. "How can you be so cruel to a woman as old and sick as my mother?"

"I suppose I'm not sick, myself!" Gloria cried. "I suppose I haven't been in the hospital myself, for weeks. . . . She doesn't need this rest a bit more than I do. Not a bit!"

Dick made no answer.

"If she goes, I don't!" Gloria blazed at him. "I wouldn't go anywhere with her on a bet! Everything I did or said, all the time we were gone, she'd raze me for. . . . Oh, I know her! . . . And you'll just have to choose between us, Mr. Man!"

Dick sat silent for a few minutes, puffing at his little brier pipe. Then he got up, put on his hat, and went out doors. He always went for a long walk, by himself, when he was upset or troubled about anything.

GLORIA stood still in the middle of the room where he had left her. A smile across her face . . . the slow, airy smile of Mona Lisa.

"Dick'd never leave me home for two or three weeks," she said to herself. "He's crazy about me!"

She went upstairs and began to sort out the clothes she would need for the trip. She was sure she was going. . . .

There was a surprise in store for her.

On Saturday morning, Dick and Mother Gregory went away on an early morning train!

Up to the last moment Dick had begged Gloria to go along. And up to the last moment Gloria had refused to go.

"Not with your mother?" she had said over and over. She was sure that, in the end, Dick would take her instead of his mother.

Even now as she stood at her bedroom window, watching his cab turn the corner of the street, she couldn't believe that he had gone and left her behind.

Thunderstruck, she pounded the frame of the window with her clenched hands, in a fit of rage.

"Oh, I hate him! I hate him!" she cried. "He'll be sorry for this!"

A knock came at the door. Ranghild stood there.

"Did you call me, ma'am?" she asked. "I thought I heard your voice."

"No. . . . Yes!" Gloria said. "Telephone the station, please, to see what time the next train for New York leaves."

She bathed and dressed in a fever of speed. She packed a suitcase. Before she had finished Ranghild came upstairs with the coffee tray.

Standing by the dresser, Gloria gulped down two cups of the hot, satisfying drink, and nibbled a piece of toast.

"My last meal in this house!" she told herself, angrily.

She took her purse from the top drawer of her dressing table. There was $55 in it that Dick had given her to pay the food bills for the month.

Downstairs in the drawer of her little desk, there was another $5 bill that she had put aside for a beauty treatment.

Gloria ran down to get it. She sat at the desk and wrote a note to Dick. "Goodbye," she scribbled. "I told you, you'd have to choose between your mother and me. And I guess you've chosen. So I'm off in a flutter of dust. I was wrong wife for you, anyway. You should have married some nice, homely woman like Miss Briggs."

Gloria did not sign the cruel little note. She put it into an envelope and laid it on the table under Dick's ash tray where he would be sure to see it when he came home.

"Ranghild," she called as she heard the girl in the hall outside. "I'm going away. When Mr. Gregory comes back from his vacation, show him this letter I'm leaving here for him."

She closed the door of the house behind her.

"Goodbye to Sing-Sing prison!" she said, looking back at it, as she went down the street.

9-PIECE ORCHESTRA—9. $15,000 ORGAN.
LAST TIMES TODAY 7:15 and 9:00

Gloria's Flaming Genius has at last been turned loose in a role that matches her fire and beauty. Gloria as the most daring heroine in drama—Gloria as the wildest, sweetest, most unconventional heroine you ever saw —Gloria as the queen of fashion in 50 frocks—Gloria as the pert and pretty and witty Venus of the wash tubs—
Gloria as the mistress of comedy—Gloria as you have always wanted to see her—Gloria at the most glowing moment in her great career.
